EVENT

Children who have suffered the loss of a parent or loved one, along with family members or guardians, will be attending the July 10, 2018 Taylor Swift concert thanks to Capital Caring and its community partners. Capital Caring (one of the largest and oldest non-profit hospice organizations in the mid-Atlantic region) has embraced grieving children and teens for more than two decades by offering grief support through specialized bereavement programs held in individual Capital Caring neighborhoods across the MD, VA and D.C. metropolitan region. Through its community partnership with the Washington Redskins, Capital Caring has access to a private suite at FedEx Field for the concert. Financial gifts from Apple Federal Credit Union and other donors will allow 17 children and their guardians to be treated to an all-expenses-paid experience, including transportation, food, concert tickets and souvenirs. Transportation is being provided courtesy of DC Trails.

Tuesday, July 10 -- Concert will begin at 7 p.m. EDT
